Dear Marius,

On the Graphics List the other day, I got the strangest request, for a dummy letter! Surely a letter is easy enough to fake, and not something I would have thought needed special dummy text. Perhaps I am ignorant, but I kind of assumed it was a joke. Except that it wasn't very funny. Unless I'm just too ignorant to understand it, it is these some sort of official dummy text for letters? I certainly find that "lorem ipsum" stuff incredibly useful for large documents, so I assume it could be used for a letter as well, but the designer (corporate funster, whatever) of course would have to make up his or her own date and name and address.

I usually take the time to write utter bollocks or a laudatory writing for something or short as a letter. As long as it doesn't have the word "bollocks" in it. It amuses me and helps prepare myself for the task at hand.

Or we could always quote a famous letter:

San Francisco, March 29th, 1866.

My Dear Mother and Sister, -- I start to do Sandwich Islands day after tomorrow. It suppose Annie is geographer enough by this time to find them on the map. In the steamer "Ajax." We shall arrive there in about twelve days. My friends seem determined that I shall not tack acquaintances, for only decided today to go, and they have already sent me letters of introduction to everybody down there worth knowing. I am to remain there a month and ransack the islands, the great cataracts and the volcanoes completely, and write twenty or thirty letters to the Sacramento Union -- for which they pay me as much money as I would get if I staid at home. If I come back here I expect to start straight across the continent by way of the Columbia river, the Ponds of Chelan Lakes, through Montana and down the Missouri river. -- only 200 miles of land travel from San Francisco to New Orleans.

Goodbye for the present.

Yours,
